THE American Federation of Labor, in convention at Atlantic City today, calls Italy "an outlaw nation" and urges the United States to have nothing to do with her. Organized labor has a twofold grievance against Mussolini. Not only has the dictator stirred up a foreign war to imperil the lives of the common people, but at home he has ruthlessly crushed their individual rights.

Hope Bobcats Hit Light Arkadelphia Team; Win 55 to 0

BRIGHT, POINT MAN

Substitute Back Scores 3 of Hope's 8 Touchdowns Tuesday Night

The Hope High School football team romped to a 55-to-0 victory here Tuesday night against a lighter Arkadelphia squad.

It was one of the worst defeats in the history of the team. The team had been undefeated in its first four games, but in the fifth game, it was completely outplayed. The substitute back scored three touchdowns, while the rest of the team was unable to do much.

He broke up Arkadelphia's main offensive by intercepting pass after pass. When most of the regulars left the game in the third quarter, Bright was switched from halfback to quarterback. He directed the team like a veteran and occasionally went back to punt and pass.

Cargile, the blond speedster, made several long runs and accounted for two touchdowns. Coneh Hammons jerked his ace carrier in the second quarter to give reserve players a chance. Cargile went back into the game in the last half, ripped off several long runs and again was benched as Hope had a 23-point lead as the third quarter opened.

Ponder, Stroud, Burr, Spears, Jones, Gibson and others saw action in the backfield and played well when given an opportunity.

The Bobcat line, heavier by 15 pounds to the man than Arkadelphia, was a stone wall to the visitors. The Bobcats seldom made a gain through the line, resorting mostly to pass which did not click.

The Bobcats started scoring early. An exchange of punts gave Hope the ball on the visitors' 20-yard line after the opening quarter. Burr of Cargile and Ponder placed the ball on the two-yard line where Ponder plunked over for the first score. Stroud kicked for extra point. Out of eight attempts

Miller Co. Sheriff Closes Up Office

All Deputies Are Dismissed to Conform With Initiated Salary Law

TEXARKANA, Ark.—(AP)—The Miller county sheriff's department closed to function in principle Wednesday and law enforcement faced a standstill under provisions of the county's initiated salary act stipulating that salaries and expenses of that office in no event shall exceed 90 per cent of its receipts.

The situation reached a climax Wednesday and necessitated action by Sheriff Tom Sewell which included release of the entire deputized force. Not only will the sheriff be deprived of his deputies but he will be compelled to serve until the first of the year without salary, shouldering the load of law enforcement alone, at the same time maintaining the custody of prisoners in the county jail.

Salesman Held Up on Fulton Road

T. W. Nicol, Little Rock Traveler, Is Hijacked for $42

Robbery 10 Miles West of Hope Keeps Officers Busy Over Tuesday Night

An unidentified bandit held up and robbed a traveling salesman who gave his name as T. W. Nicol, of the Zip Manufacturing company of Little Rock, late Tuesday afternoon on the Hope-Fulton road and escaped with $42 in cash.

Nicol immediately reported to Hope officers, and bloodhounds from Prescott were rushed to the holdup scene, but they were unable to pick up the bandit's trail. Apparently the robber caught a ride on the highway and escaped in the direction of Texarkana.

Officers worked on the case until 2 a. m. Wednesday without success.

Taken in by Ruse Nicol told Sheriff Jim Bearden that he was en route to Texarkana when he saw a man lying on the highway waving for him to stop. Believing the man had been run over or had suddenly been stricken with illness, Nicol brought his automobile to a halt.

The man suddenly jumped to his feet, pistol in hand and told Nicol to move over. The robber got in beside Nicol and commanded him to drive. That was about 10 miles west of Hope.

Apparently a stranger in this section, the bandit appeared nervous as they neared the Fulton toll bridge. He ordered Nicol to stop and turn around. Nicol said the robber threatened him with the gun, so obeyed orders.

They drove east toward Hope for about three miles and then the bandit ordered Nicol to turn into a side road. They drove into the woods about 200 yards off the highway where the robber searched the automobile, taking a traveling bag filled with clothing. He then took Nicol's wristwatch and his purse of $42.

Returns His Watch Nicol reported to the sheriff's office. Bloodhounds were rushed here, taken to the holdup scene where the traveling bag and all its contents were found. The bandit had disappeared, apparently walking back to the highway where he caught a ride.

Nicol said the man was wearing blue overalls, had about a week's growth of beard, long black hair and weighed about 160 pounds. He was about 5 feet nine inches tall.

No trace of the bandit had been found late Wednesday afternoon.

Refuses to Swear Claim to a Child

Mrs. Muench Backs Down in Face of Claim of Unmarried Mother

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—(AP)—Two months after she hailed the birth of a son as a "gift from God," Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench Tuesday refused to swear to the witness stand to claim the infant as her own. It was the second time she had not identified herself as a parent of the child whose motherhood is claimed by Anna Ware, an unwed servant girl from Newtown, Pa.

Two weeks ago, while she was on trial at Mexico, Mo., accused of participating in the 1931 kidnapping of Dr. Isaac D. Kelley, wealthy St. Louisian, Mrs. Muench, sister of a state Supreme Court justice, failed, either accidentally or deliberately, to enumerate the baby as a member of her family. She was acquitted of the kidnapping.

Mrs. Muench appeared in court Tuesday as one of the respondents in habeas corpus action brought by Miss Ware to regain possession of her infant, claimed by her to be in the Muench home. Both she and her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, refused to answer when asked by lawyers if a child ever had been born of their marriage.

Miss Ware from the witness stand Tuesday identified Mrs. Muench as the woman "she understood" had arranged to adopt the Ware baby before it was born. She said she was taken for an automobile ride by Mrs. Muench and Wilfred Jones, a lawyer friend of Mrs. Muench, a few days before the birth of her child. Jones has admitted arranging for adoption of the child, but said it was wanted by a Memphis (Tenn.) family.

Power Company to Resist TVA Move

Memphis Can Not Support Duplicate Systems, Private Firm Contends

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—The Memphis Power & Light Co. Tuesday protested the city's proposed contract with the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The company charged that the community can not support a "duplicate" electric distribution system, that the city's survey as to its distribution needs was "inadequate and insufficient," and that the duplication in systems "inevitably would result in surcharges upon TVA resale rates for electric service to the city of Memphis or its citizens."

The protest added that the action by the city would jeopardize the company's investment in electric properties, system and facilities.

Under terms of a contract, approved by the city Water and Light Commission and tentatively approved by Mayor Watkins, the city would be furnished TVA power for resale at standard TVA rates.

The protest was filed with Mayor Overton and his City Commission as they met Tuesday afternoon to approve the contract.

In a referendum election last year, Memphis voted, 17 to 1, for a bond issue in excess of $9,000,000 for erecting or purchasing a municipal distribution system for TVA power, to be brought to Memphis from Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, and later, from the TVA power pool at Pickwick Dam. Mayor Overton had announced he was ready to open negotiations in an effort to purchase distribution facilities of the Memphis Power & Light Co.

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—The defense contention that alleged relatives aide Abie L. Shushan, political lieutenant of the late Huey P. As the government proceeded with its effort to establish the accusation that Shushan evaded payment of approximately $53,000 taxes on assessed unreported gross income of $448,000 for the years 1929-33, the day's testimony produced the following developments:

Zenge Admits He Murdered Rival

Attorneys Claim He Was Insane When He Mutilated, Killed Dr. Bauer

CHICAGO.—(AP)—On a theory of severe emotional shock, culminating in a sudden fit of madness, the defense "faked" Tuesday its hopes of saving Manducella W. Zenge from conviction for the mutilation-slaying of Dr. Walter J. Bauer.

The strategy of the young Missourian's attorney was disclosed at a surprise conference in the chambers of Presiding Judge Cornelius J. Harrington, where they announced acceptance of "the state's claim that Zenge performed the emasculation which cost Dr. Bauer's life."

Home town witnesses, intended to present a picture of Zenge as wrapped in his love for Louise Shaffer, who later became Bauer's wife and widow, that "he suffered a severe emotional shock when she married," then began testifying.

Woman Held for Strange Plotting

Was Going to Use One Man's Estate to Catch Still Another One

KANSAS CITY.—(AP)—A blonde, widowed cook with amazing matrimonial intention, slumped repentant in a jail cell Tuesday night while police examined the ingredients of this assorted concoction:

A plan to wed a pool hall operator as her third husband.

Use his presumed estate to pay for the slaying of a street car operator's wife.

Then—marry the street car operator with whom she told police she became so enamored that she role on his street car just to look at him.

"I must have been crazy," moaned Mrs. Lottie Crumley, 34, discussing the plot Police Detective John Bayless said she detailed to him.

"I had no intention of marrying her," said the pool hall operator, whose late wife was nursed in her fatal illness by Mrs. Crumley.

"Neither did I," echoed the street car operator, who asserted his present 12-year-old marriage remained a happy one and that Mrs. Crumley was "a post."

"For a long time my only pleasure had been to ride on his street car," Mrs. Crumley said, "often from one end of the line to the other. I would just sit and admire him."

Thomas J. Higgins, chief of police detectives, said Mrs. Crumley would not be released before Wednesday. He added, however, that she appeared to be innocent of any overt act.

Mrs. Crumley, mother of a 12-year-old son, said the street car operator "told me repeatedly he would marry me if it weren't for his wife." He denied it.

Names of the mortician and the pool hall man were withheld. Mrs. Crumley was arrested Monday after a man told police she offered him $50 to kill the pool hall operator as soon as he became her husband.

Self-Made Thrills—Some Children Enjoy Fangs of Rage and Jealousy

Still Too Many Dying From Childhood

We can congratulate ourselves in the fact that the infant death rate in the United States has dropped from 300 a thousand to from 50 to 70 a thousand, in the last few years. But don't get too exuberant over this.

There are still 100,000 babies dying every year in the first month of life, and there are still 100,000 every year born dead.

Furthermore, some 16,000 to 18,000 women die every year in the United States from conditions associated with childbirth.

Education in prenatal care will cut down these figures still further.

There are several reasons for the still great number of deaths from childbirth.

It has been estimated that two-thirds of all the deaths could be prevented if the care of the mother had been proper in all respects.

By proper care we include not only the medical attention given at the actual time of childbirth, but the conditions under which the women live, and particularly the care given to the women preceding childbirth.

Every woman ought to see a doctor just as soon as she knows she is going to have a child. She should also have a regular examination at least once every two weeks during the first few months, and once each week during the last few months, before the child is born.

Regardless of the vast amounts of money that have been spent in educating women in the importance of such care, there are still tremendous numbers who do not know the necessity of prenatal care and who fail to understand what proper prenatal care includes.

Such people disregard persistent vomiting, bleeding, nausea, and even difficulty with their vision, although everyone of these symptoms is a warning that great danger is near.

When expectant mothers learn more about the conditions of childbirth and take proper care of themselves and their babies, the death toll from this cause will be further diminished.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

He Defies the Law—and Gets Justice.

The popularity of the murder stories of Erle Stanley Gardner is probably a significant indication of the American attitude toward the criminal courts.

Mr. Gardner's perennial hero is Perry Mason, a hard-boiled lawyer who skates up to and over the edge of the law in his efforts to keep his clients from the gallows. Usually his clients are innocent; now and then they turn out to be guilty; but Perry Mason always sees to it that they get off, even if he has to break the law to do it, and he always leaves the reader satisfied.

And that tells us something. Americans don't care much for legal forms. They drive under them in a criminal case to get at the essentials—which is just what Perry Mason does. These books must be horrifying to the English; to Americans, they are realistic and exciting.

Anyway, Mr. Gardner has written a new one—"The Case of the Caretaker's Cat" (Morrow; $2)—and it is a honey. This time Perry Mason is retained by the old caretaker of a rich man's house on a matter of minor importance, and finds himself waist-deep in a murder case. By connivance and vaguely illegal skull-duggery he gets a rough approximation of justice done, in the typical American manner, and a swell detective story is the result.

You might also be interested in "Smoke Screen" by Christopher Hale (Harcourt Brace; $2), which tells of a homicidal maniac loose in a summer colony which is temporarily isolated by a forest fire. The action is fast and exciting enough to atone for a certain lack of reality in the characters and the plot.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Beauty Novelties Take Hold

Now that summer tan is just a memory, the early fall permanent wave season past and gone, and the social season gloriously launched, it is a good idea to go over the list of beauty ideas that not only are new but correct and likely to be with us all winter.

First of all, we might as well agree that nail polish is brighter and, judging by the hands seen across fashionable hotel tables, the smarter the woman the brighter her polish. As a matter of fact, old shades are creeping in to the manicure picture. Corals, rusts, wines and even copper may not be here to stay, but they are popular at the moment. One manufacturer of nail polish suggests one color over another, showing pale gold over scarlet, silver over coral, pale pink over scarlet and the like.

Lips are brighter, too, and thank fortune, the trend is toward naturalness. Nowadays the best groomed women are picking lipsticks that enhance the tones of their own lips.

Perfume manufacturers undoubtedly have decided to take to heart the prob-

The GOLDEN FEATHER

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JEAN DUNN, secretary to DON-ALDI MONTAGUE, lawyer, delays her answer when BOBBY WALLACE, young automobile salesman, asks Jean to marry him.

At the Golden Feather night club Jean meets SANDY HARKINS, whose business connection is vague. She also meets LARRY GLENN, federal agent, Larry is trying to locate WINGY LEWIS, bank robber.

Sandy introduces Jean and Bobby to Mr. and Mrs. LEWIS. Bobby arranges to sell some bonds for Lewis. He sells them to Jean's employer.

A few days later Sandy learns police are looking for him in connection with a robbery. He considers this to mean and she goes with him to police headquarters to establish an alibi for him at the time of the holdup.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIII

JEAN DUNN sat down on the bench and looked doubtfully at her employer. But of course! He was Sandy's lawyer; naturally, since Sandy wanted to clear up this absurd misunderstanding, Mr. Montague had come along, just to make sure everything went right.

Mr. Montague beamed at her. "It's all pretty absurd, of course," he said. "But sometimes these absurd mistakes can cause a great deal of trouble before they are straightened out. . . . Ah, there's Inspector Thomas. Shall we go in?"

He got up and walked through a swinging gate in the waist-high railing which cut the room in half. Sandy helped Jean to her feet, drew her hand through his arm, and followed; behind them came the other man who had been sitting with Mr. Montague when they came in. Jean stole a look at him; he was a stubby, roughly-dressed person, and he hadn't taken the trouble to shave himself that morning. His face was vaguely familiar.

They passed half a dozen desks, where shirt-sleeved men were busy with letters and sheafs of paper, and went into a small office. There was a battered old desk over by a smudgy window, and back of it sat a tall, lantern-jawed man in a gray suit. He nodded to Mr. Montague as they came in, and gestured toward chairs.

"Well, Mr. Montague, what's this all about?" he asked in a friendly tone. Mr. Montague sat down, laid his gray felt hat on his knees, and assumed an air of complete frankness.

"Just a little misunderstanding, Inspector," he said. "I want to clear it up before it gets serious. This young man here—he's mentioned toward Sandy—he's been hearing a facial resemblance to a man who is being sought for that Acme Box Company robbery last week. Since it just happens that he was a good 15 miles away from the place when the robbery took place, I thought it would be wise to come in and tell you about it. Then he won't be bothered about it any further."

"Hm," said Inspector Thomas. He looked at some papers, frowned, and said: "Do you mind if I have Sergeant Hagan in here while we talk? He's more familiar with the details of the case than I am."

"Not at all," said Mr. Montague.

THE Inspector rang a buzzer, and when a clerk stuck his head in the door he said, "Send in Hagan." After a moment, Sergeant Hagan came in and took a seat beside the inspector.

"Now then," said Inspector Thomas. "This holdup," Montague went on, "as I understand it, took place Friday afternoon about a quarter past three, on Ontario road a few blocks from the Acme plant?" The two policemen nodded. Montague turned to Jean with a fatherly smile.

"This is Miss Jean Dunn, who works in my office," he said. "Miss Dunn, will you please tell these gentlemen what you did Friday afternoon?"

Jean looked at the noncommittal faces of Thomas and Hagan, felt a little wave of nervousness, swallowed hard, and then spoke:

"Someone came to see Mr. Montague a little after two that afternoon," she said, "and Mr. Montague told me that I could have the rest of the day off. So I started to go home, and downstairs in the lobby I met Mr. Harkins. We got into his car and drove out to a place on the Grand river and rented a canoe. We paddled up the river for a while, and then drifted back. It was getting on toward dusk when we got back to the boat house. Then we had dinner at a little restaurant there, and after that Mr. Harkins drove me home. We got home about 8 o'clock, I guess, or a little later."

"This was last Friday?" asked Sergeant Hagan. She hesitated briefly, then nodded. "Yes," she said.

"Just to be on the safe side," said Mr. Montague smoothly, "I've brought Mr. Stout."

THE nondescript man who had followed them into the office looked up. Jean suddenly recognized him as the owner of the Grand river boat house, from whom they had rented their canoe.

"Have you seen these people before, Mr. Stout?" asked Mr. Montague.

The boat man nodded.

"Last Friday, about 3 o'clock or a little after, they came and rented a canoe," he said. "They went up the river in it, and didn't get back until half past six."

"And do you know where the Acme plant is?"

The man nodded.

"How far would you say your boat house is from that plant?"

"Oh," said Mr. Stout, "by road, I guess it must be 12 or 15 miles."

Mr. Montague looked at the two officers.

"Is this satisfactory?" he asked. They glanced at each other. Hagan was wearing a faint, dissatisfied scowl, but he said nothing. Inspector Thomas turned again to the lawyer.

"I don't see how it can be any thing else," he said.

Mr. Montague chuckled softly.

"Then Mr. Harkins can go his way in peace?" he said.

Hagan's scowl became slightly more noticeable, and he grunted rudely. Inspector Thomas was less ruffled.

"As far as this is concerned, yes," he said. There was a faint menace in his tones that made Jean uncomfortable. Mr. Montague adopted a severe expression.

"What do you mean by that?" he asked. The inspector smiled.

"Nothing at all," he said, getting up. "That was just my way of putting it. No, he's as free as the birds in the air. We shan't be bothering him."

The conference was at an end. Mr. Montague got up, thanked the officers for their courtesy, and

FIRST DOWN -AND THEN SOME

BY HARRY GRAYSON

Carl G. Snively is hereby chosen the successor of Gilmore Dobie as the most melancholy soul in football.

Snively's letter to the writer, which arrived the morning of the day on which his University of North Carolina team rocked the south with one of the most startling upsets in years by crushing Tennessee, 38-13, backs that old line "Slugg Pears Purdue" way back into the shadows.

Even this season, when Dobie has plenty of reason for being pessimistic at Cornell, Snively out-glooms Gloomy Gil.

I'm having Snively's letter framed, for it is perhaps the grandest bear story ever spilled. Here it is:

"All I know is that the people who are talking about Carolina having a great football team must be kidding because I can't see the slightest reason or basis for the idea. I don't want to discuss our weak spots, and I never make statements for the newspapers—not for quoting, at least, but we have seven weak spots on our team and only two that are even satisfactory."

"We play Tennessee without a single halfback fit to go into the game, and without a tackle worthy of the name."

Fearful the Worst

"The result probably will be startling to those who have been picking Carolina as a wonder team or whatever it is that they have been calling us."

"Everything that can go wrong with a football team has gone wrong already this season, and a lot of original ones besides the usual misfortunes. I haven't had time to answer a letter for three weeks and I can't stop to write more now."

Tomorrow I have to develop a new left half and change an end into a tackle again, and I must get out and talk over the signals with them tonight. If you want some more dope, write me a little later after we have quit trying."

North Carolina had been huffed as one of the strongest squads in Dixie. Wallace Wade, of Duke, especially specified that North Carolina and Tennessee were the toughest outfits below the Mason-Dixon line.

So you can imagine my surprise at reading Coach Snively's letter. All that was needed to give it the atmosphere of a funeral was a black edge. I nearly broke down and cried for poor Coach Snively and his unfortunate Tar Heel. The expert had them wrong. Here was an aggregation, rated a one of the most formidable in the southland, almost ready to call off its schedule and take up the less strenuous sport of tating until another fall rolled around.

Tar Heels Strike

So what happened? Flashing a dazzling overhead attack behind an alert, hard-hitting line, the Tar Heels inflicted the most crushing, humiliating defeat the Volunteers have suffered in more than a decade as they rolled up five touchdowns, five extra points, and a field goal.

More than 15,000 persons, filling all but the corners of Child-Watkins Field at Knoxville, sat openmouthed and wide-eyed as the Orangemen fired and fell back in their thrusters at the Blue and White line and made good only two out of 25 aerial attempts for their only scores.

Outrushed in the line, outthought in the backfield, and outplayed the entire 60 minutes, Major Bill Britton's boys never were in the game.

Coach Snively said that he was entirely without halfbacks, yet it was Burnett, a substitute, who took the kickoff on the North Carolina 10-yard stripe and sprinted 99 yards through the entire Tennessee team for the Chapin Hill men's fifth and final touchdown in the closing period.

Now, was Coach Snively kidding us, his players kidding him, or were the Volunteers kidding the Tar Heels?

Anyway, the pre-game statement Coach Snively put in writing will do until a better bear story comes along.

It's a Fine Art

Inspect Your Car Regularly

Year by year the deadly traffic toll reaches new peaks. In the thick of the battle to reduce this loss of life are state Motor Vehicle Administrators. Twelve of them, officers and members of the American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators, have contributed a series of articles describing the major causes of automobile accidents. Number Eleven in the series: "Inspect Your Car Regularly" follows:

By JOHN Q. RHODES
Director, Motor Vehicle Department of Virginia, Member of American Association of Motor Vehicle Administrators

THE motorist who does not keep his car in good mechanical condition is usually a menace to automobile safety. More than 78,000 motor vehicles involved in accidents in this country last year had mechanical defects, according to statistics compiled by a member company of the National Bureau of Casualty and Surety Underwriters.

This indicates a widespread negligence on the part of the motoring public. An automobile cannot be maintained by gas and oil alone. It requires regular care and inspection. This is the one way to prevent such dangerous deterioration as inadequate brakes, defective lighting, or tires in poor condition. Special equipment is important too. For instance, last year the drivers of over 21,000 vehicles involved in accidents on slippery roads had not taken the proper precaution of putting on tire chains.

No one would care to admit that he was careless enough to endanger the lives and persons of others. Yet that is what you do when you take a car with faulty brakes on the road, or commit some similar thoughtless act. It is agreed that automobile manufacturers today employ all their resources of mechanical ingenuity to incorporate safety into their products. It is up to the owner to maintain that safety factor.

The importance of keeping your car in good condition is obvious. You hold up the money value of your car. You maintain the economic driving efficiency of your car. You safeguard your car and yourself from accident. You fulfill your obligations to your fellow motorists.

Ladies of Chorus Have Brains Too

Intelligence Quota of Many Is Higher Than Average College Graduate

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—Many a glamorous chorus girl has a higher intelligence than the average college graduate. Albert Edward Wiggam, psychologist, said Tuesday—but she doesn't have enough children. "As a result," Wiggam asserted, "this country is losing in brains and beauty. The very gorgeous young woman who should be producing beautiful, intelligent children haven't time for motherhood because they are in demand at night clubs, before the movie camera and on the stage."

It was recalled that brains and beauty once were believed to mix about as well as water and gasoline. There was that old saying, "beautiful but dumb." Psychologist Wiggam snorted. "Look," he said, shuffling his files, "look here. A check-up once disclosed that Marian Killon, who appeared in the 'Countess Maritza' had an intelligence quotient of 159 in contrast with 128 for the average college graduate."

Dorothy Weisman, a Ziegfeld chorus girl, had 168. Georgette Moore, who was cast in 'Great Expectations' has 167. Kay English, another Ziegfeld beauty, had 168. And Edith Davis of 'Naughty Riquette' had 184. "We do not have the average I. Q. for our nation's presidents but it is safe to say it would not reach 184."

"Yet it was found that 800 chorus girls produced a total of only 25 children. There are 1,800 women in 'Who's Who'—the average about one child apiece. At that rate, within six generations they will be entirely extinct."

He termed the situation an "upsetting of the biological apocryph." "There was a time," said Wiggam—an executive committee member of the American Eugenics Society—"when the lawyers, artists and musicians produced more children than then teamsters and farmers."

"The time has past. Our cities are decaying. They are being maintained not by the birth of children from intelligent families but by the flocking of country families to urban centers."

Identification of deposits aggregating $31,094 with Fenner & Beane, New Orleans investment brokers, by C. H. Kern, an official of the firm, which he said represented stock purchases by the defendant.

When the government first disclosed, through New York bankers, the existence of bank deposits made by the defendant in the Chemical Bank & Trust Co., the defense made clear its intention to prove that the account was really a "political fund" of the Long Louisiana organization, and that Shushan merely handled it for campaign purposes.

Rome. One ironic wartime feature is that Aduwan shopkeepers are selling champagne for the same prices as wine.

Military officials here said that virtually all the population of Aduwa frightened away by the Italian advance of the town has returned.

They expected local chiefs to come back within a few days to offer submission to Italian troops. The Intelligence Service learned the only reason for the hesitance on the part of some chieftains and their tribesmen to return to Aduwa, it was asserted, was a report which spread among the natives that surrendering tribesmen are being sent deep into Eritrea.

This rumor arose over the fact that several chieftains were sent to Asmara, Eritrea, for questioning in regard to the movements of the enemy. They were permitted to return to their native lands immediately and their presence is a convincing influence to those natives who have been frightened away.

Chiefs Still Loyal.

Many Ethiopians who surrendered in this region, however, are still loyal to Emperor Haile Selassie, an independent survey disclosed. They feel the Italian occupation is an example of the "law of force." Tuesday morning the correspondent met one of the chief men of the town and the following dialogue shows the state of feeling of part of the Aduwan population: "How do the people feel about the Italian occupation?"

"They cannot do anything but accept it. It is a law of force."

"Why did not Ras Seyoum (commander of the Northern Ethiopian army) put up a bigger fight?"

"Because he realized it was useless. The Italians had overwhelming numbers and materials."

Battle Predicted. The chieftain then pointed to the mountains beyond Aduwa, saying with pride. "But he (Ras Seyoum) is there with a huge army now. He is very strong."

"How far do you people think the Italian army will advance?" "They may not even reach Makele (60 miles south of Aduwa)." "Are you looking for a big battle soon?"

"Yes. A large part of the population is still in the hill villages. This street, which once was a river of people is now deserted."

Hundreds of American mules were used by the right wing of the Italian army in the early days of the occupation. Many, however, died because they were not accustomed to the climate. The writer saw the first heavy artillery batteries going over the mountains towards Aduwa.

Home Clubs

Washington The Washington Home Demonstration club met Friday October 11 in the home of Mrs. J. A. Wilson with 11 members and three visitors present. The president, Mrs. Lee Holt called the meeting to order and after prayer roll call and minutes of previous meeting read by Secretary, Mrs. Elmore.

Miss Afford being present in Miss Griffin's stead, judged the canning exhibit for the Ball fruit jar contest.

As this was achievement day for the club quite an interesting collection of quilts and other handwork including baskets, rugs, etc., and several antique articles made by Washington citizens of long ago were exhibited.

Mrs. Claud Agee invited the club to meet with her home second Friday in November at 2 o'clock.

Africa regardless of League of Nations sanctions and would fight "even a European war" if compelled.

These declarations—in which the spokesmen, however, declined to predict war in Europe—came after a day in which Aksum, holy city of the Ethiopian empire, was occupied peacefully by the Second Italian Army Corps under Gen. Pietro Maravigna, and in which Italian war correspondents in the Omager Selti region of Ethiopia, near the border of the Anglo-Ethiopian Sudan, reported the surrender of Ethiopian chieftains and their tribes.

Rome hailed the "cordial reception" which General Maravigna was reported to have received from priests of the Coptic Christian church at Aksum as indicating a definite split between Emperor Haile Selassie and the Ethiopian church.

A Poor People Spokesmen here appeared confident the rest of the world "eventually would come to the Italian point of view." Sanctions against Italy, they said, might be annoying, but Italy will not submit to them. Asserting "we know we are a poor people," one spokesman said if necessary "we are prepared to fight."

He added, "If necessary the people will strip their ring fingers to help." Unofficial discussions of a possible settlement of the East African war brought from government spokesmen the assertion that Italy is making no offer of terms to halt the campaign. The program in Africa, they said, is a military one, of protecting the frontiers of Italy's African colonies.

Nino Martini at Saenger Thursday

The golden tenor voice that has already thrilled millions, now delights new legions of music lovers and motion picture fans as Nino Martini, handsome operatic sensation, makes his initial film appearance in "Here's to Romance," which comes Thursday and Friday to the Saenger.

Starred with a supporting cast that includes Genevieve Tobin, Anita Louise, Mme. Schumann-Heink and Reginald Denny, Martini enacts the leading role in this delightful picture of an operatic tenor's private life and loves.

Immortal arias from "La Tosca," "Pagliacci" and "Cavalleria Rusticana" are included in the repertoire of Martini, who also sings "Here's to Romance," "Midnight in Paris" and "Hunkledora," the latter a travesty on the "Continental" by Con Conrad and Herb Magidson.

The plot of the picture is a light-hearted romance, with Miss Tobin and Anita Louise vying for Martini's affections, and Miss Louise winning out by the narrowest of margins.

"Officers of both Tennessee and Arkansas are reluctant to enforce criminal laws on these islands because of uncertainty about jurisdiction," Mr. Bailey said. Wrong Brother Is Named to Office?

So Says Washington Rumor—"Ridiculous," Other Ritter Brother Declares

NEW YORK.—Gen. Hugh S. Johnson said Tuesday he had been informed on excellent authority in Washington that a mistake had been made when Victor F. Ritter was appointed his successor as WPA administrator.

The intention was to appoint Bernard Ritter, according to his information. The general made these assertions when angered by a published report from Washington that a follower of his had spread a false rumor that the appointment was a result of mistaken identity.

For some days reports have been current that the Washington administration intended to appoint Bernard Ritter, a brother of Victor. Bernard is a Democrat and held a position in the NRA, serving as head of the foreign language newspaper "section" of New York. Victor is a Republican, and has been critical of the New Deal.

"The report is ridiculous," said Bernard Ritter. "I could not possibly leave my position with my newspapers."

Victor Ritter also denied the mistake, and then added: "Well, maybe President Roosevelt will wish he had not appointed me."

but he did appoint me. The Ritter brothers publish several newspapers, of which the best known are the New Yorker, Santa-Zeitung and Herald and the New York Journal of Commerce.
